Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Kirk Kilisseh, the strategic aim of the Bulgarians in their attempt to capture Adrianople, which in turn would be of immense value to them in their attempt to throw a line of troops from the Black Sea to the Aegean Sea to cut off Constantinople, was lost by the Turks at 11 o'clock this morning after two days of hard fighting. The losses on both sides were tremendous; hand to hand combat at the point of the bayonet won for the Bulgarians.

Kirk Kilisseh, both a town and a fortress, is located about thirty-five miles east of Adrianople in a mountain defile and guards one method of communication between Constantinople and Adrianople. Its capture destroys one position of defense for the Turks and gives the Bulgarians another stronghold in their march toward Constantinople, 100 miles away.

The Bulgarians captured 1,200 prisoners, several Krupp and rapid fire guns and a quantity of wagons and ammunition. The Turks, after the engagement, began a rapid retreat to Viza, which is seventy-four miles northeast of Constantinople. The Turks themselves officially admit that their troops are retreating. They state in Constantinople, however, that there was a heavy engagement, and that the Turks, not being in sufficient force to press the attack, began an orderly retreat. Bulgarian despatches, however, describe the aftermath of the battle as a rout of the most complete order, fleeing Turks abandoning their heavy guns to travel faster, while the Bulgarians followed and pressed them.

One report has it that 50,000 Turks were captured. Official announcements contain no reference to this and it is regarded as untrue.

The Bulgars now occupy a line as long as their Turkish frontier, and are more than twenty miles inside Turkish territory. Their next attack will be Adrianople and they are in a position now to attack it from the west, north and northeast.

All the Turkish forces except the army corps which is holding Adrianople will now be ordered to fall back on the main army, which is concentrating between Baba Eski, thirty-five miles southeast of Adrianople, and Lule Burgas, five miles further. The Turks will then have seven corps and four more in reserve, which are now being formed near Constantinople. These towns are important inasmuch as they guard the railroad between Adrianople and Constantinople. If these towns or Adrianople are lost communication between the Turkish capital and the Turkish armies engaging the Greeks and the Servians in the western part of European Turkey will be cut off.

The Turks asserted that the retreat from Kirk Kilisseh was purely a strategic move, made in an effort to concentrate all their forces.

There was the wildest sort of a celebration in Sofia last night when news of the capture of Kirk Kilisseh was announced. There were thanksgiving services in the churches and the streets were jammed with the jubilant populace carrying the flags of the allies and singing the national anthem. Bonfires lighted the streets, and the enthusiasm over the victory already won and confidence that Adrianople will be taken soon knew no bounds.

The Greeks report that Rizah Bey's army of 22,000 men, which the Greeks have driven from Serdika, is now facing utter destruction or surrender. The Greeks have backed them against the cliffs of Mount Pigra and are now pressing them from the front, so that the Turks have no alternative but to fight, which means annihilation or to surrender.

The Servians have reported that they have captured Koumanovo, but reports from Constantinople do not confirm this. According to official Turkish announcements, Zekki Pasha with his Turkish army of 20,000 men attacked them.

While the battle was in progress the Bulgarian troops arrived and attempted a flank movement. One of the Turkish divisions was seen against them and routed them. The Bulgarians were driven for miles across the country and abandoned four guns. The Turkish War Office professes to believe that this disposes of the Servians for all time.

On the other hand the Servians claim to have captured Koumanovo. Officials at Belgrade state emphatically that the Servians have won a big victory, in spite of terrible losses, and now occupy a position between Koumanovo and Uskub, twenty miles west.

FOUR ALARM FIRE AT CONEY.

Herring's Hotel, Majestic Baths and Line of Bungalows Burned.

Coney Island had another fire scare early this morning when shortly before 2 o'clock George Herring's hotel at Twenty-first street and Surf avenue caught fire and was destroyed in a short time.

The flames jumped from Herring's to the bathhouses of the Majestic Hotel and in a twinkling the flimsy wooden structures were aflame from end to end. The flame was fanned by a strong westerly wind, which swept sparks over the line of bungalows between Surf avenue and the hotels and ate them up as if they were cardboard boxes in a furnace.

It was but a short time before four alarms had been turned in by Chief Lally and Chief Kenion was speeding toward Coney Island in fear of another Dreamland blaze. It was feared at first that the blaze might reach Ravenhall's, but the firemen saved that.

George Herring and his wife were asleep on the top floor of their hotel when they smelled smoke and ran to the street in their night clothes. The fire was under good headway by the time it was discovered, and it was impossible to save Herring's.

MRS. WILSON NO SUFFRAGETTE.

Says Women Should Pay More Heed to Children's Needs.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Grover Cleveland were guests at the banquet at the New Century drawing room here to-night and which was given to mark the opening of the fifth annual conference of the Home and School League.

Dean Walter T. Sumner of the Chicago Vice Commission presided as toastmaster and Mrs. Wilson made a spirited address, in which she gave her hearers the impression that there were more important things for women to attend to than to seek the ballot at this time.

In part the wife of the Democratic presidential candidate said:

As far as I, personally, am concerned and my family, we have been more interested in social work than woman suffrage. There are such great needs for the children of this country at this time that this work has appealed to me as the one which should occupy the minds of women more extensively than should the right to vote.

I am not criticizing those who have made this subject a study. They are probably better versed than I am on the question, but really to me it seems that there is so much else that is of pressing importance that the women ought to apply themselves to questions of this character, that have to do with the saving of the boys and girls who attend school and who do not know how to spend their time after school hours, that I would rather devote my energies to this work than to take part in a movement that would secure the right of equal franchise for women.

Mrs. Cleveland did not speak, owing to a cold, but she was warmly greeted and shook hands with every person in the room.

CARUSO IN MILAN COURT.

Sues Signorina Giachetti, Agent and Journalist for Defamation.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

MILAN, Oct. 24.—The trial of the suit for defamation of character brought by Signor Enrico Caruso, the tenor, against Signorina Giachetti, the operatic singer, a theatrical agent named Loris, a journalist named Micalisi and a chauffeur began to-day.

The case arose out of charges made by Signorina Giachetti in a suit brought by her against the tenor in 1909 that he had tampered with her mail and seized a rich contract which had been sent to her by Oscar Hammerstein. The court found that these charges were false and that there had been considerable perjury and bribery. The prosecution of Signorina Giachetti and the others was then ordered. The singer in her suit asserted that Caruso's act in tampering with her mail was a piece of revenge because she had ceased to love him.

Caruso was present in court to-day, but Giachetti did not appear. She wrote a letter to the Judge in which she accused Caruso of ill treating and cruelly abandoning her, falsely denouncing the birth of her two sons and stealing her jewels.

Counsel for Caruso in response to this produced letters from Signorina Giachetti to the tenor in which she thanked him for his liberal allowances, asking him to forgive her and promising not to return from South America, where she has been singing.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow. It is likely to last several days, as there are forty witnesses to be examined.

WILL COACH SOCIAL CLIMBERS.

Long Island Woman Starts Etiquette
Bureau in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—First aid for social climbers scaling the heights of Capitol society and expert advice and assistance in social functions is the long felt want filled here to-day by the establishment of the "Bureau of Social Requirements" by Mrs. Peter Rathbone La Boulais.

In a charmingly arranged office on exclusive Connecticut avenue Mrs. La Boulais is ready to act as social mentor and inform her clients on affairs social—everything from the etiquette of leaving cards down to advice on how to entertain. Mrs. La Boulais was formerly Miss Isabel Townsend of Long Island.

The bureau will make a specialty of furnishing chaperones, taking charge of entertainments, deciding vexed questions of precedence at semi-official functions, giving advice on wardrobe, coaching in society small talk, performing social secretarial duties and taking charge of residences during the absence of the owners from the city.

SEARCHLIGHTS SCAN SEA FOR LOST BOY AND DOG

Orless Boat, in Which Wind
Took Them Far From Land
Found Empty.

ARE GIVEN UP FOR LOST

Truant and Pet Probably Tried to Swim Ashore and Were Drowned.

An eleven-year-old boy and a mongrel dog drifted out to sea from Coney Island last night. Police boats and other searchers zigzagged back and forth until just before midnight searching for the boat, while a northwest wind blew up a heavy sea, which convinced the searchers that the boat and boy and dog had long ago been swamped.

A few minutes before midnight one of the watchers found the boat, right side up, drifting in to shore at Sea Gate. There was a pair of shoes in it. It is believed that the boy attempted to swim to shore and was drowned.

The boy was Clinton Fox, son of Peter Fox, who lives at Surf avenue and West Twenty-fifth street, Coney Island, and is a druggist employed in Ancell's store at Surf avenue and West Sixteenth street.

The police boat Patrol cruised off the coast till midnight with her big searchlight playing. Police launch No. 7 from Jamaica Bay and launch No. 6 from Harbor A, Manhattan, assisted the Patrol, and half a dozen power boats also joined in the search. Besides these the Sandy Hook pilots and the captains of the Staten Island ferryboats and all other craft, which ply about the lower bay at night were asked to keep an eye out for a small boat containing a boy and a dog.

Clinton Fox and William Taylor, a boy of the same age, son of Edward Taylor, a builder of 2350 West Twenty-second street, Coney Island, played truant from Public School 80 yesterday afternoon. They found a rowboat at the foot of West Twenty-fifth street on the Gravesend Bay side. There were no oars in it, but Clinton Fox found a pair and with the stray mongrel who had attached himself to the party the boys spent the afternoon rowing about Gravesend Bay. They worked their way down around Norton's Point and dusk found them on the ocean.

Just off the point is a bad piece of water, known as the Potato Patch, with an unenviable record for boat mishaps and drownings. At the foot of West Forty-fifth street a breakwater juts out into the Potato Patch. When the small boat reached the stretch of turbulent water the boys lost all control of it and it was thrown against this breakwater. Young Fox was thrown out. The Taylor boy could not swim and hanging to a thwart in terror he managed to stay afloat. The dog remained, whimpering in the bottom of the boat. Both oars were lifted from the oarlocks and floated away. The surf drew the boat back from the breakwater and shot it past, out to sea.

William Taylor doesn't know how he got to shore. He said he started to swim and did swim for a while and then he didn't remember anything until he found he was lying on a beach.

The point where he was lying is just below the home of Herbert E. Jones, a produce merchant, on the bluff at Forty-fifth street, Sea Gate. Ethel Reider, a maid in Mr. Jones's employ, heard the boy's cries and with James Leydon, a watchman at the colony, found Taylor. The police were notified and an ambulance was called. Taylor, suffering from water, pointed out to sea and told about the boat and the dog still left in the small boat. One policeman thought he could see a small boat dancing on the waves.

William Taylor was able to go home after treatment at the Coney Island Hospital. His story was repeated to the Harbor Squad and the task of searching for the other boy was begun. It already was dark. Taylor was afraid that a hole had been stove in the boat when it was thrown against the bulkhead and that it would soon sink.

MRS. SICKLES MAY HELP AGAIN.

Sheriff Postpones Sale of Husband's Relics at Her Request.

Mrs. Daniel E. Sickles and her son Stanton called at Sheriff Harbinger's office yesterday and asked him to adjourn the sale of the relics of Gen. Sickles under an execution for a judgment of $5,000 obtained by the Bank of the Metropolis. The sale had been set for yesterday and Mrs. Sickles asked that it be delayed until November 10.

Mrs. Sickles saved her husband's relics when they were to be sold before by paying her money, and following her husband's refusal to be reconciled, although he knew of her sacrifice, she declared he could be put out into the street before she would aid him again.

Mrs. Sickles told the Sheriff yesterday that she thought she would assist her husband again, but wanted time. The Sheriff adjourned the sale to November 1, but said he couldn't grant a further adjournment unless the judgment creditor consented.

NO VOTE BUYING IN DELAWARE.

Three State Chairmen Out of Four Make Pact.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 24.—Republican State Chairman Mitchell and Democratic State Chairman Bayard to-day accepted the proposition of Robert Houston, chairman of the original Progressives, not to buy any votes this year. William P. White, chairman of the National Progressives, is not included in the agreement.

Mr. Mitchell says that as the Republican platform declares against bribery he is very glad to agree. He will request the three county chairmen to comply with the law by also having Democratic assistants present when a voter asks for aid in marking his ballot.

DIAZ TO BE SHOT AT SUNRISE.

Result of Court-martial at Vera Cruz Surely "Guilty."

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24.—Gen. Joaquin Beltran is to-night at Vera Cruz presiding over a summary court-martial board trying Gen. Felix Diaz on a charge of treason.

The court-martial was ordered by President Madero this afternoon, with instructions that the findings of the board, whatever they may be, would be carried out immediately. This means that Diaz will be shot at sunrise, for it is certain he will be convicted. In fact, he had been convicted before the court-martial was summoned.

It was learned to-day that the Diaz revolt was actually a Madero trap, set and sprung by the President himself. Diaz had long been suspected of intriguing against the Government. To catch him at his own game Madero permitted him apparently to go about Vera Cruz without being spied upon, but as a matter of fact Administration service men were his constant advisers. Diaz was led to believe that the major part of the army would join his colors the minute he hoisted the standard of rebellion. He failed to see the plot until too late.

Even when Gen. Beltran's troops appeared before Vera Cruz he believed the soldiers were coming to join him immediately and would attack those who remained loyal the moment he (Diaz) gave the word. This accounts for the apparent neglect of Diaz to give battle the moment the Federals came in range.

Hermit Had $30,000 in Trunk,
Valise and Under Carpet.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—With $30,000 in bank notes, gold and silver secreted around his room at 253 South Eighth street, Marjorie Meriño, 24 years old, a hermit, died this afternoon.

The neighbors say he was too mean to have a physician. He died alone as he lived. Little is known of Meriño. He never spoke to any person. He never worked. He just existed.

Persons who saw him thought he might have an income large enough upon which to live in the frugal manner in which he did.

The police, summoned at his death, looked through a dilapidated valise first. It was crammed full of bills of small denominations. There was nothing else. They then started to search a trunk. This was half full of silver coins from nickels to dollars.

Bank notes of large denominations were secreted beneath the carpet. They were spread neatly over the floor so that no lump betrayed their presence. Bank books unearthed show that Meriño had nearly $100,000 in savings banks of the city. There is nothing to show where Meriño got his money and nothing to show to whom it should go.

JERSEY PUTS BLAME ON GIBSON.

Coroner's Jury Holds Lawyer Responsible for Sazo Death.

The Hudson county, N. J., Coroner's jury, which has been holding an inquest into the death of Rose Menachik Sazo, who lost her life in Greenwood Lake, Orange county, N. Y., on July 15 last, brought in a verdict last night that Burton W. Gibson is responsible for her death.

As Gibson, a New York lawyer, is already under indictment in Orange county for the murder, and trial is set for November 18, the proceeding in New Jersey is entirely gratuitous and will affect Gibson only if at some future time it is decided that the crime of murder was not committed within the jurisdiction of the New York courts. In that case the Coroner's verdict would expedite Gibson's return to Hudson county.

There have been four hearings in the inquest, which was held by Coroner J. M. Houghton. Coroner's Physician O. Schultze of Manhattan was the principal witness and swore that Mrs. Sazo had been killed by strangulation of the throat, caused by pressure from within.

PRISON FIRE LAID TO CONVICTS.

Others in Cells in Great Glee See Warehouse Burn.

JACKSON, Mich., Oct. 24.—Fire believed to have been set by convicts started in the big binder twine warehouse of the State's prison here to-night at 5:30. A great wall of flame leaped from the brick walls.

Fortunately for the State the stock of finished twine was not as large as was stored there before harvesting time, but about 500 tons were destroyed.

Most of the convicts had been locked in their cells when the fire began. They looked out between the bars in glee at the flames, which threatened to lick up the big binder twine factory about 100 feet away.

A general alarm was turned into the city fire department and every fighting apparatus in the city dashed to the prison, while police in patrol wagons and citizens in automobiles joined in the rush to the penitentiary.

Thousands of people attracted by the flames shooting above the roof of the prison building hurried to the scene on foot. And within a few minutes there were more people surrounding the prison than at any time during the riot there some weeks ago.

The loss will be $50,000.

ELLISON RAGING IN TOMBS.

Convicted Murderer, Acting Like a Madman, Gives Keepers Trouble.

Late watchers last night around the Criminal Courts Building while the jury was deliberating on the verdict in the Becker case were startled by shrieks that came from the Tombs prison. There was a rush in the direction from which the sounds came, but nothing could be seen from the street.

Inside the prison guards under the direction of Deputy Warden McLean were struggling with an emaciated and apparently mad creature, the wreck of the once big time Bowery hussy, James Ellison, who is under sentence to serve from eight to ten years in State prison for killing William J. Harrington on June 30, 1911.

BECKER GUILTY OF MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE; MIDNIGHT VERDICT.

MRS. BECKER COLLAPSES AS HUSBAND IS LED AWAY

Overcome as He Throws Kisses at Her From Upper Gallery.

FAINTS FIRST AT VERDICT

Woman Who Had Bravely Stood
Ordeal Gives In at Last Moment.

Mrs. Becker, who was in the attendants' room waiting for the verdict of the jury, fainted dead away when the news that her husband had been found guilty was brought to her. Her sister-in-law, who during the long hours of the evening had been holding the hands of the wife of the accused, worked over the stricken woman for several minutes before she opened her eyes.

By this time some court attendants who had heard of Mrs. Becker's plight had hurried to her side, and they added their efforts to those of the convicted man's sister.

While Lieut. Becker heard the verdict of death his wife had been in Justice Goff's chamber. Afterward, with her friends, she went to the floor above. At 12:45 o'clock she left the upper floor and tottered down the broad steps on the north side. When the party reached the center of the floor a member of her party pointed to the gallery of the floor above. There stood Becker.

As Becker was led over the Bridge of Sighs he stopped, turned and threw a kiss back to his wife, who was watching him from the mezzanine floor of the Criminal Courts Building. Mrs. Becker threw several kisses back to him with both hands and her husband turned away and continued over to the Tombs.

Mrs. Becker was led down stairs at 12:40. With her were her brother and sister-in-law and Charles B. Pitt. As she reached the inner door on the White street side of the building on her way to her taxi cab she collapsed. Her brother, who had a firm hold on her, saw her fall and caught her as she fell. After two or three minutes she rose from the chair and the party continued out into the outer corridor to get the air from the street.

District Attorney Whitman, hurrying out, passed them without recognizing the members of the party. Before Mrs. Becker left the building she collapsed a second time at 12:56 o'clock and water was brought to revive her. She again was placed in a chair. At 1:05 she had recovered herself sufficiently to be led to her taxi cab, which drove away as soon as she and the others in the party had entered.

Becker was led to the Tombs by Deputy Sheriffs William Hangan and George Spellman. Deputy Warden McGowan was at the front gate of the prison when four or five loud bangs on the iron door leading into the prison from the Bridge of Sighs announced the arrival of the prisoner. McGowan and Michael McLean hurried to open the door.

As Becker passed through the corridor of the prison on his way up stairs he turned for a moment and looked out toward the front door of the prison, where a number of newspapermen were gathered. Then he was led upstairs to his cell.

WAR'LL NEVER END, SAYS WOOD.

Points to Balkans and Tells California to Increase National Guard.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—"War is not over, and never will be so long as men are men," says Major-General Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, who is here to-day inspecting proposed sites for fortifications.

"The war in the Balkans," he continued, "surely gives the champions of arbitration something to think about. Arbitration will not maintain the peace of the world. A nation's only safeguard against the horrors of war is preparedness for war."

Urging an increase of the National Guard in southern California Gen. Wood said:

"Although the United States has the best system of coast defense in the world it will not keep a strong army from invading our shores. Unless you have men on your legs with guns in their hands you cannot keep an enemy from landing and establishing himself. You people must do your part toward building up a stronger National Guard."

MAJOR FISHBACK SUED.

Charged With Conversion of $42,000 in Stocks Entrusted to Him.

Major George W. Fishback, who got his title through his appointment on the staff of a Governor of this State and who made an investigation of affairs in Cuba in behalf of the Federal Government just before the Spanish-American war, was sued in the Supreme Court yesterday for $42,000 for alleged conversion of stocks.

Miss Violet Beach charges that through false pretences Major Fishback got possession of stocks valued at $42,000 and used them for his own purposes. She alleges through her counsel, Harold Remington, that Major Fishback was able to get possession of the stocks because his wife was an intimate friend of Miss Beach. It is alleged that Major Fishback admitted that he made improper use of the stocks.

Major Fishback was sent to Cuba while he was in the State Department in 1896 as secretary to William J. Calhoun, the present Minister to China, who was appointed by President McKinley to investigate conditions in the island.

BIG TIM SULLIVAN ON THE MEND.

Larry Mulligan Says Doctors Have Simply Been Keeping Him Quiet.

Big Tim Sullivan will be back in his rooms at the Hotel St. Denis before the end of next month, his intimate friends declared yesterday. Larry Mulligan, Big Tim's stepbrother, said the candidate for Congress in the Thirtieth district had been in town all the while since he was stricken with diabetes, but his whereabouts have been kept secret so that he should not be disturbed.

It wasn't because Big Tim wasn't physically able to register that he hadn't appeared on any of the appointed days to jot down his name, his stepbrother declared yesterday, but because his physicians were afraid of subjecting him to the congratulations of his many friends before he was strong enough for the excitement.

Sullivan is improving fast, his friends say, and is anxious to get back into the game again.

BLERIOT RETURNS TO FLYING.

Appears in Light Hydroaeroplane of His Own Design.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—M. Blériot, the aviator, who of late years has devoted all of his time to designing and manufacturing air machines, revisited the aerial domain to-day in a hydroaeroplane of his own design and built by himself.

The machine weighs 100 kilograms less than similar machines. Blériot flew in the air and speeded over the water in splendid style. With two passengers he covered a mile in a minute and a half.

M. Blériot says he is going to furnish this sort of machine to the Colombian Government for service on rivers.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRL A THIEF.

Principal Tells Pupils of Her Act and of Her Disappearance.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—Principal Eugene Baker of the Girls' High School this afternoon assembled the entire school in two sections before him and told them that one of the girls had been detected stealing from the dressing rooms.

The principal told the pupils that the girl came of an excellent family and that there was no reason for her to steal. He attributed her act to evil associations that she had formed at the school. He added that after the girl was caught stealing she disappeared and her family had got no trace of her. He said that fears were entertained that remorse had caused her to end her life. Because of her family and for the protection of the girl Dr. Baker said her name would not be disclosed unless she was not found.

The detective bureau at the City Hall says they have no clue as to what has become of the girl, who is not yet 15 years old. There is in the list of missing girls in the records of the Police Department, although there is nothing to show that this is the girl who is a relative of one of the city's most prominent contractors.

WILSON HOLDS PRINCETON.

Poll Gives Him 1,112 Out of 1,420
Votes Cast.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 24.—The result of a poll of the undergraduates of Princeton was announced at a mass meeting held in Alexander Hall to-night under the auspices of the Woodrow Wilson Club of the university. Of 1,420 votes cast 1,112 were for Wilson, 153 for Taft, 142 for Roosevelt, 8 for Debs.

Gov. Wilson put in a quiet day and evening at his home. He sent the following telegram to Prof. Robert M. Fitz of Wesleyan University:

"My warm greetings to my Wesleyan friends assembled in Democratic rally this evening. It is delightful and reassuring to see the young men of the country gathering to champion the cause of free government as against special interests."

JUROR SAYS COUNSEL BUTTS IN.

Objects to Lawyer's Objections, So the Court Declares a Mistrial.

While Justice Ridd of Albany was hearing a case in the Supreme Court yesterday
